VISIT TO SAF Centre for Military Experimentation

Date: 26/01/07 (Friday)

Time: 3.00 pm – 5.00 pm

Place: SAF Centre for Military Experimentation, 311 Stagmont Road (in Stagmont Camp)

Description:

The SAF Centre for Military Experimentation (SCME), located at the heart of Stagmont Camp, was officially opened by Minister for Defence, Rear-Admiral (RADM) (NS) Teo Chee Hean on 5 November 2003 as the one-stop centre for leading-edge SAF experiments. Through experimentation, the SAF can acquire new war-fighting knowledge, develop innovative operational concepts and doctrines to enhance mission planning.

The two-storey experimentation centre has three laboratories - the Command Post of the Future Lab, Battlelab and the C4I Lab. These laboratories provide users and engineers with an environment to explore, experiment and demonstrate technology capabilities for the SAF's future force.

The Command Post of the Future Lab serves to explore questions and possibilities for command and control in the future. Its physical and technical infrastructure is intended to simulate fixed, distributed and mobile command post at various levels of command and control.

The Battlelab allows for virtual experimentation of operational concepts for air, sea and land platforms. The lab includes simulation systems and games like Joint Conflict And Tactical Simulation (JCATS) to create force-on-force scenarios.

The C4I Lab facilitates the experimentation of the technical issues related to implementation of Command, Control, Communications, Computers and Intelligence technologies. This lab has facilities to allow technical tests of C4I technologies in a controlled environment, especially prior to field trials.

For more information on SCME, please visit the internet website at www.mindef.gov.sg/fsd/scme.

As SCME is a military restricted area, no photographic equipment is allowed for the visit.
